Objectives of Maintaining a Counselling and Career Guidance Center

1.1. What a School Counselling and Career Guidance Center Is

The School Counselling and Career Guidance Center is defined as the section that conducts student counselling and career guidance services. Through this, students are supported in achieving holistic well-being as well as in pursuing their future educational and career aspirations.

All physical and human resources of the standardized School Counselling and Career Guidance Center must be managed ethically. In terms of human resource management, the student counselling and career guidance teacher is the primary person who offers his/her services. He or she should be a person with specialized subject knowledge, professional training, necessary skills and a good personality. In managing physical resources, the premises of the center have to be maintained properly, systematically and professionally.

With the current issues in the modern complex society, male and female students face many challenges in achieving their educational and professional aspirations. The primary goal in establishing this center is to foster the development of well-rounded individuals capable of effectively navigating societal challenges and confronting future obstacles with resilience.

The paramount task of this center is to establish a supportive culture that facilitates the effective implementation of counselling and career guidance within the school. Through this initiative, the entire school community will develop a comprehensive understanding of the necessity of such services, thereby fostering an environment with minimal barriers to proper referrals and the organization of programmes.

Promoting School Counselling and Career Guidance Centers

4.1. Procedure of Raising Awareness within the School Community to Obtain Necessary Support for the Student Counselling and Career Guidance Center and its Process

Today's school student is navigating through particularly challenging circumstances. In this scenario, it is not feasible to provide the necessary intervention for the student solely through the Counselling Center under the direction of the principal. Hence, it is essential to raise awareness within the school community and obtain qualified and resourceful support from relevant sectors when necessary. Therefore, raising awareness within the school community about the significance of counselling and its pivotal role has become an essential priority. The primary objective of this promotion is to emphasize that safeguarding the future generation is a collective responsibility of all members of society.

4.2. Why Does the Counselling Center Need the Support of the School Community?

A very great responsibility is entrusted to the community in shaping the future generation of students into good citizens. Therefore, it is more appropriate to guide students in the right direction through the school-based Counselling and Career Guidance Center. Consequently, it becomes the duty of the community to provide the necessary support to the Counselling and Career Guidance Center. Likewise, by creating a platform for open discussions on mental health, existing misconceptions about seeking counselling can be reduced, and through normalisation, a larger number of people can be encouraged to support Counselling and Career Guidance Centers within the school community.

4.3. Why Is the Contribution of the School Community Important for this?

The process of a child's socialisation takes place through the home and the school, while its primary role is carried out by society. In this context, although a greater responsibility regarding the child is entrusted to social institutions, there is limited understanding and awareness of this responsibility within the general society. Therefore, awareness should be raised about social responsibility towards the child, and this responsibility should be formally entrusted through the counselling center, with the support of society. By interacting with the school community, counselling centers can be strengthened to provide valuable feedback on the challenging situations faced by present-day school students. Through this, contributions can be made towards creating an informed school community that supports the improvement of mental health.

Assessments, Monitoring Tools and Model Formats

When maintaining the School Counselling and Career Guidance Center, a comprehensive monitoring and evaluation system should be developed to continuously assess the impact of interventions and to ensure systematic implementation, and a formal information, data, and monitoring process should be maintained. To make this process effective, the availability of model formats and data systems will be essential for maintaining counselling and career guidance services at a high standard. ## School Counselling and Career Guidance Center - Code of Ethics

Accepted professional ethics or standards are required for the development of a profession and its safety. The code of ethics thus established is helpful for the advancement and development of the counselling and career guidance service and the protection of the client, as well as for the protection of the counsellor.

1. Confidentiality

Client students reveal all their personal information/ problems to the counselling teacher based on trust. Therefore, it must be ensured that the information of clients who seek counselling services is not disclosed to any organization or individual. The information of client students must be protected; however, there may be instances where their information can be disclosed under the following circumstances.

It is the responsibility of the teacher in charge of counselling and career guidance to refer the client student to a psychiatrist or a senior counsellor if the client student is at a dangerous mental level, causes harm to another person, or if the school counselling teacher can no longer continue the counselling process for the client's problem. This referral should be made after informing the principal, with or without the consent of the student.

The counselling teacher is also obliged to provide this information to the relevant government institutions through the principal in a legal matter.

2. Not accepting personal benefits

The counselling and career guidance teacher should not charge fees, accept stipends, or receive any form of donation for the counselling services conducted in the school.

3. Friendliness

Personal relationships should not be maintained except for friendly professional relationships. Even if the counsellor is friendly with the clients, he or she should not maintain personal relationships with them after the counselling sessions or make them family friends.

4. Not mixing the client's problems with one's own pleasure

Even if the issue presented by the person seeking counselling appears unusual or contrary to accepted norms, it should not be ridiculed or treated as a matter of amusement.

5. Avoiding inappropriate transactions

The counselling teacher should not engage in inappropriate relationships with clients, business dealings, or lending activities, nor become a party to the client's problems. Furthermore, unnecessary relationships outside the teacher code of ethics should not be maintained.

6. Not taking responsibility for the clients

The counselling teacher should not form emotional attachments or dependencies with the client. The role of the counselling teacher is to support the client in understanding their problem. However, it should not be assumed that all student problems can be solved by the counselling and career guidance teacher, nor should solving those problems be considered the responsibility of the counselling and career guidance teacher.

7. Provision of support services and referral services

If the counselling and career guidance teacher encounters clients whose problems or unidentified abnormal symptoms are beyond the teacher's capacity, the client may, with his or her consent, be referred through the school principal to appropriate institutions where such support services can be obtained. For this purpose, the following procedures may be used.

- Informing the In-service Adviser for Counselling and Career Guidance in the educational zone where the school is located, and obtaining support
- Informing the Subject Director, Counselling and Career Guidance at the Zonal Education Office and obtaining support
- Obtaining the support of the Manager of the Provincial Psychosocial Resource Centre
- Referring the client to the medical officer at the relevant Medical Officer of Health (MOH) office attached to the school
- Referring the client to a psychiatrist at a nearby government hospital
- Obtaining support from officers such as the counselling officer and child rights promotion officer at the nearest Divisional Secretariat

- 8. The cultures, moral values and rules and regulations of students and their families should be respected.
- 9. Personal questions from students that make you feel uncomfortable should not be answered.
- 10. Steps should be taken to obtain information about the clients' previous treatments and counselling methods, and, where necessary, recommendations should be sought from relevant institutions and officers. This will help ensure the provision of a higher-quality service to the client.
- 11. Clients should not be used for experiments or research activities, nor should their data be shared or obtained.
- 12. Counsellors should engage in continuous professional development and obtain relevant educational qualifications and support from senior counsellors when needed.

A school counsellor is a teacher working in schools under the Ministry of Education, and therefore, in addition to these ethics, should act according to professional ethics and organizational policies.

The school counselling and career guidance teacher should act in a manner that protects students' confidentiality within the school, while also being mindful of maintaining a professional external appearance.

To maintain the professionalism of the counselling and career guidance teacher, it is important to refer to the Code of Ethics presented by the American Psychological Association (APA).

Process of Involving External Service Institutions and Officials in the School Counselling Process

In the school counselling process, the counselling teacher and the principal need to refer students facing issues to external support services, based on the nature of the problems. Accordingly, the objective here is to provide accurate guidance to the school on the sectors to which referrals should be made, based on the nature of the problem and focusing on the maximum well-being of the student.

The Counselling and Career Guidance Teacher plays the main role in the school counselling process, and she/he should inform the principal as required by the counselling process. In difficult situations faced by children, the Counselling and Career Guidance Teacher will have to intervene in various ways at different times. For this, the support of governmental and non-governmental institutions will have to be sought as necessary. In the school counselling process, there are instances where the teacher in charge of counselling can intervene within their scope, as well as instances where they must seek the help and intervention of institutions and individuals outside of their scope.

The main aspects of the school counselling process are prevention, development, treatment, and referral. Here, based on the nature of the problem, it is important for the Counselling and Career Guidance Teacher to inform the principal, clearly identify the institution or individual to whom the referral should be made, and ensure understanding of the referral procedures. Common examples of issues within the school counselling process that require referral to a third party include child abuse, child exploitation, drug addiction, problems arising from the internet, as well as critical mental health issues that require referral to a medical practitioner. In such instances, the principal makes referrals outside the school system to institutions like the Police, National Child Protection Authority, Probation Department, National Dangerous Drugs Control Board, Department of Social Services, and the Ministry of Health, as well as to responsible officials such as psychiatrists and senior counselling officers, as necessary.

In a student's problem, intervention is carried out through two main sectors. Namely,

1. Psychosocial Intervention
2. Legal Intervention

When intervening through these two sectors, the School Counselling and Career Guidance Teacher and the Principal have to act within various limitations. In such situations, there is the possibility of obtaining the cooperation of recommended institutions and officials. A few such instances are presented below.

7.1. Problems Regarding Child Abuse/ Exploitation

In such a situation, the child's psychosocial and legal intervention must be carried out in both aspects. In this regard, it is most important that the School Counselling and Career Guidance Teacher acts as follows:

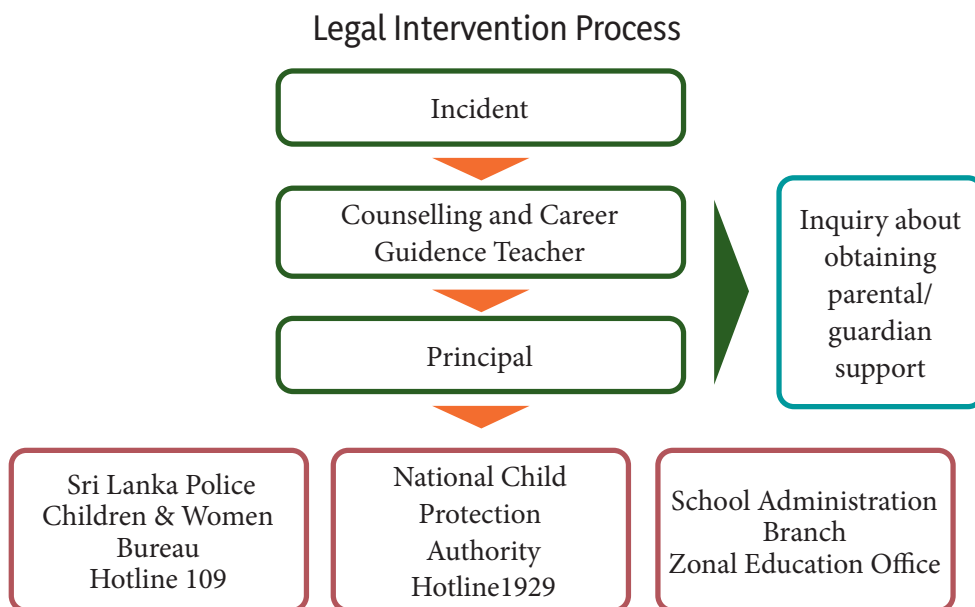

Diagram 16

- Students and parents can be directly informed by institutions such as the National Child Protection Authority and the Police.
- Furthermore, complaints can be made anonymously to the National Child Protection Authority via the hotline number 1929, and log entries can be made as required to indicate that such a complaint has been made.
- If phone calls are made, the Counselling Teacher should record that the relevant parties have been informed regarding the incident. (Date informed, time, and telephone number)

- The principal and teachers must provide support for the necessary legal procedures (Preliminary report, recording of evidence)
- In such an instance, protecting the privacy and confidentiality of the victimized children is essential.
- The Counselling Teacher can seek the support of the Legal Aid Commission when necessary.

Depending on the nature of such legal interventions, officers of the Sri Lanka Police – Bureau for the Investigation of Abuse of Children hold a Case Conference, involving the relevant institutions and state officials, based on the maximum well-being of the child. Here, not only institutions related to the legal framework but, as needed, actions are taken based on the child's, the family's, or the community's social development. To involve state institutions and individuals relevant to the problem, and to ensure their intervention, officers of the Police Children and Women's Bureau must make the necessary legal request to the Honorable Court to compel the required institution to intervene. (Examples include the National Child Protection Authority, National Dangerous Drugs Control Board, Probation Officer, Social Services Officer, Counselling Assistant Officer, etc.)

- Legal action can be taken regarding emotional abuse based on the recommendation of the psychiatrist.
- Issues regarding the child's right to maintenance can be referred to the Legal Aid Commission.

Psychosocial Intervention

When a school student faces a problematic situation, in addition to providing the necessary legal coordination facilities, the required psychosocial interventions to restore the student's daily educational and social life must also be carried out. For this purpose, the School Counselling and Career Guidance Teacher should intervene according to their capacity, or if not possible, the child should be referred to external support services with the permission of the principal or parents (relevant information is provided below). Following such a referral, the support of the Counselling Teacher and the school must be provided for the external counselling process when necessary.

- If a child is attempting suicide or shows suicidal tendencies, refer them to the doctor or psychiatrist at the nearest hospital, depending on the severity of the situation.
- Seek assistance from the National Institute of Mental Health (NIMH) via hotline 1926.

Institutions for Referral to External Services

Example:

- Unsafe Children - Probation Officer, Police Officer, National Child Protection Officer
- Violation of Child Rights / School Non-Attendance - Child Rights Promotion Officer, Psychosocial Officers at the District / Divisional Secretariat
- If a child is facing a problematic situation due to a family-related issue, the Child Rights Promotion Officer (CRPO) at the Divisional Secretariat can also be informed.

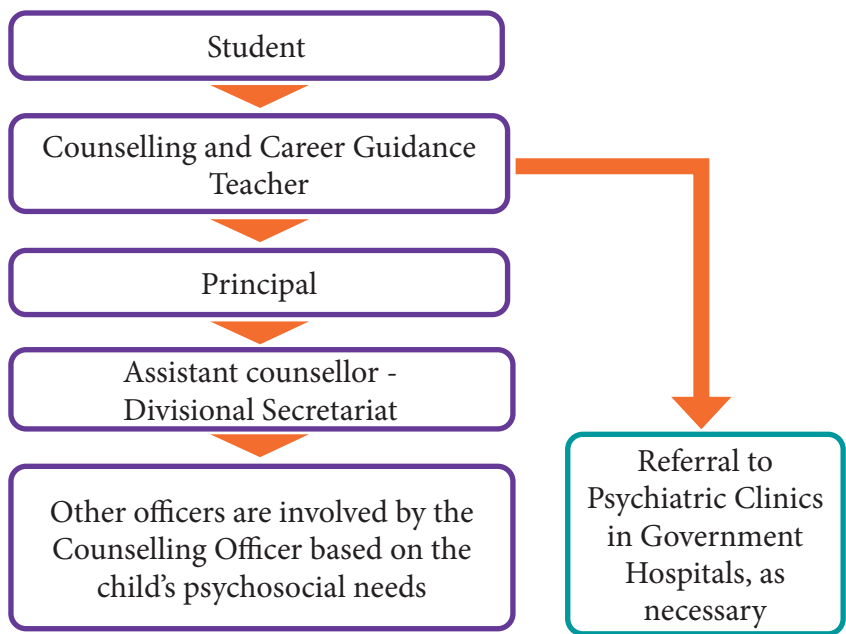

Diagram 17

7.2. Problems Related to Drug Use

In some cases, children who have resorted to drug use are referred for counselling. In such an instance, the counselling teacher and the school must intervene with the child's best interests as the primary consideration. If the technical expertise required to address a drug-related issue is not available, the School Counselling and Career Guidance Teacher must take steps to refer the child to recommended institutions or officials. The necessary guidelines for this process are provided below.

Students suspected of having used drugs can undergo preliminary checks in coordination with the Drug Education and Information Officer at the Divisional Secretariat.

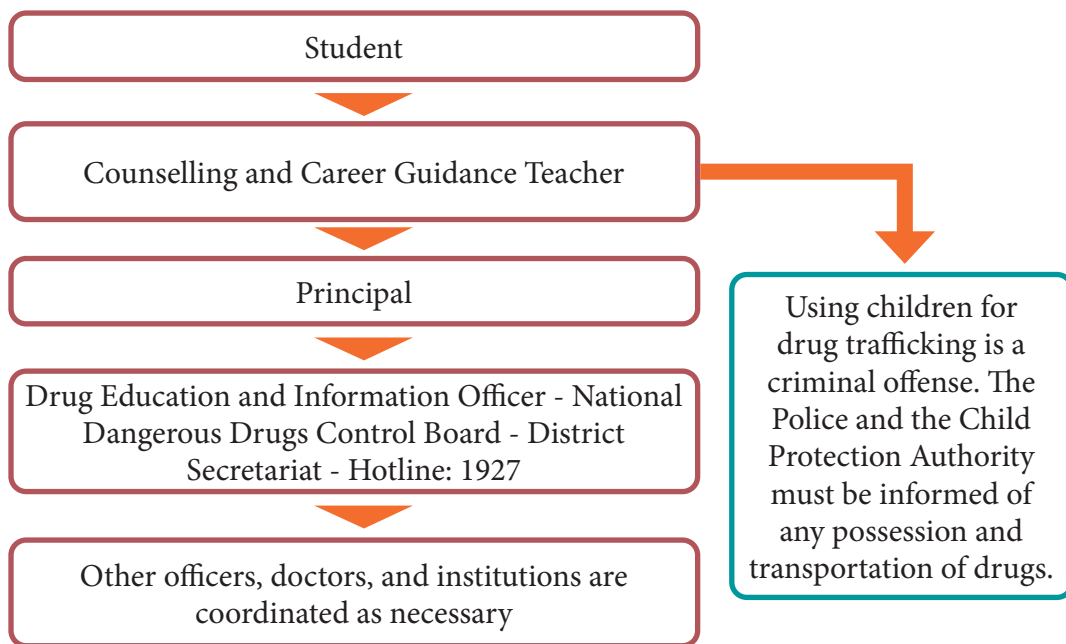

Diagram 18

7.3. Problems Related to Internet Usage

Currently, school children widely use mobile phones and social media, and thus face various internet-related problems. Therefore, it is necessary to identify school students who face problematic situations through the use of mobile phones, social media, and the internet, refer them to external support, and be aware of the actions to be taken. Here, intervention should be carried out according to the nature of the incident.

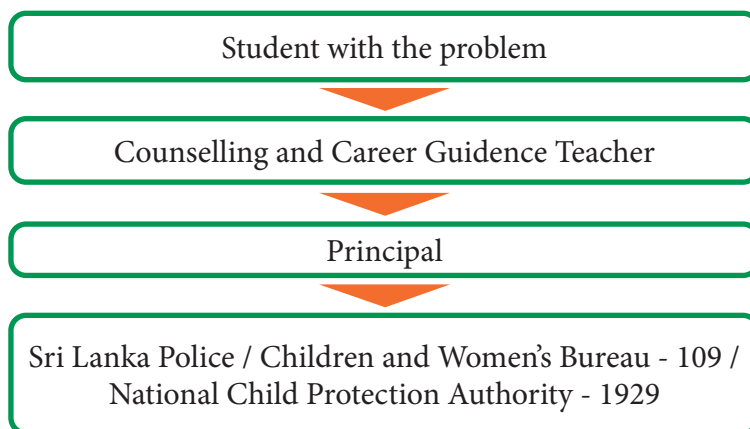

Diagram 19

If there is evidence related to the victim (e.g., screenshots, web links, photos)

If there is evidence related to the victim (screenshots, web links, photos)

In some instances, if a student’s photos or videos have been shared on social media or the internet without their permission, the procedures for the Counselling and Career Guidance Teacher to follow are outlined below. In certain cases, the affected student may take steps independently. If such an incident occurs within the school and action is being taken, the Counselling and Career Guidance Teacher must ensure that the principal is informed. In this context, the affected student may also notify their parents or the School Counselling Teacher. The relevant format is provided below.

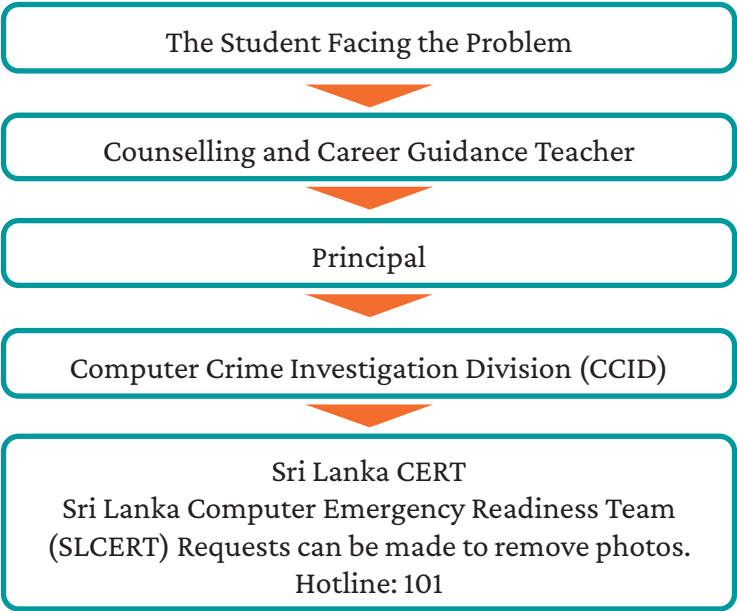

Diagram 20

- In such a situation, a hotline has also been introduced to contact the Sri Lanka CERT institution. That number is 101.
- Computer Crime Investigation Division (CCID)
  - ◆ Telephone number: 0112300642
  - ◆ Email: Dir.ccid@police.gov.lk

Special Notes

- If a child victim of abuse or a witness (parents, principal, counselling teacher, or any other person) is subjected to threats, intimidation, or influence by the suspect or any other related party, it can be reported to the nearest Police Station or to the Authority for the Protection of Victims of Crime and Witnesses at 1985.
- The Probation Officer or the Child Rights Promotion Officer can be informed about unsafe children and children in need of alternative care.
- Any instance of child abuse not mentioned here can be reported to the National Child Protection Authority at 1929 or to the nearest Police Station.

Introduction to Career Guidance

8.0. Introduction

Career guidance is a structured, systematic process aimed at providing individuals, especially students, with the necessary knowledge, skills, and support to make informed decisions about their education, training, and career paths. It is a developmental process that begins early in education and continues throughout an individual's lifetime, helping them explore their interests, abilities, values, and aspirations in alignment with the world of jobs.

In the modern global labour market, career choices are no longer limited to a linear or a small set of professions. With technological advancements and changing economic conditions, individuals are required to adapt to new career opportunities and challenges. Career guidance plays a vital role in preparing students to adapt to these changes confidently and competently.

School career guidance is a process that can contribute to long-term sustainable domestic economic development by helping students to set realistic goals, develop resilience and build a sense of purpose in life.

Thus, within Sri Lanka's general education system, school career guidance can play a significant role in aligning students' aspirations with the local and global labour markets, and especially in minimizing the gap that exists between education and the labour market.

8.1. The Nature and Importance of the Subject of Career Guidance

School Career Guidance plays a crucial role in assisting students to make informed decisions about their future, and the following are some key aspects of this critical role:

- Self-awareness: Career guidance helps students understand their strengths, interests, values, and personality. This self-awareness forms the foundation for more informed career choices.

- Informed decision-making: By providing accurate information about various career paths, educational requirements, job prospects, and future trends, career guidance directs students toward making better decisions regarding the subjects to choose and the courses to pursue.
- Goal setting: Career guidance assists students in setting realistic and achievable goals. It involves a series of objectives necessary to achieve long-term aspirations.
- Skill development: Career guidance helps students develop essential life skills such as communication, problem-solving, goal setting, time management, and adaptability, which are beneficial for achieving success in both personal and professional life.
- Reducing dropout rates: When students see a clear connection between their education and their future, they are more likely to remain in school and pursue higher education or vocational training.
- Bridging the gap between education and the labour market: Career guidance bridges the gap between education and the world of work. It exposes students to real-life work environments through internships, job shadows, or mentorships.
- Adaptability: In a rapidly changing job market, career guidance helps students remain flexible and open to new opportunities. It encourages lifelong learning and adaptability.

Accordingly, in general, school career guidance can be further explained as a broad, future-oriented, and empowering discipline that plays an important role in preparing students for the transitional situations they face in education, employment and life.

8.2. Role of the Career Guidance Teacher

The role of the school career guidance teacher is a crucial factor in helping students make informed decisions about education, training, and future careers. This role includes:

- Building awareness:
Introducing students to various alternative career pathways and opportunities. Organizing awareness sessions on higher education, vocational training, and job trends.
- Support for career planning and decision-making:
Assisting students in creating Career Portfolios and Personal Development Plans (PDPs).
Guiding students on subject selection that aligns with their career goals (especially for Grades 10 and 12)
- Facilitating self-assessment:
Helping students through psychological tests and various activities to better understand themselves.

- Individual and group career counselling:

Providing individual guidance to help students understand their strengths, interests and aspirations.

Conducting group sessions on topics such as decision-making, goal setting and self-development.

- Providing information and resources:

Maintaining and updating a Career Guidance Center with information on vocational education and training opportunities.

Providing accurate, up-to-date information on university courses, scholarships and the job market.

- Coordination with various institutions:

Implementation of School Career Guidance

9.0. Introduction

In the new general education reforms, policymakers have recognized career guidance as an essential component of education, and reforms are currently subject to revision to help students understand themselves, explore opportunities, and make informed decisions about their future learning and career paths. School career guidance plays a significant role at major transition points for students, such as subject stream selection after Grade 9, national examinations in Grades 11 and 13, and entry into higher education, vocational training, or employment. By integrating career guidance into the curriculum and co-curricular activities, the country can nurture skilled citizens who are ready to contribute meaningfully to its socio-economic development.

Accordingly, to formally introduce career guidance at the school level, the National Institute of Education has developed teacher training modules, career guidance handbooks, and activity-based subject curricula. Through this, career guidance services have been expanded to assist students in Grades 6–10. The following are some of the subject curriculum development activities.

9.1. Introduction of Career Guidance Student Activity Handbooks and Teacher Guide Compilations for Secondary Grades (13-6)

Objective: One of the main challenges faced by school Career Guidance and Counselling Teachers within the school is the lack of a formal, nationally implementable curriculum and student activity handbooks for classroom-level execution. This issue was identified through surveys. As a solution, the National Institute of Education (NIE), in its role as the curriculum developer for the general education system, prepared Student Activity Handbooks and Teacher Guide Compilations in both Sinhala and Tamil media for secondary grades, from Grade 6 to Grade 13, in 2019.

Themes:

The student activity handbooks for Grades 6 to 13 were structured around four main themes, considering the career development process and the physical and psychological development stages of students.

- Development of self-awareness:

A critical factor in the career development process and individual career success is the systematic identification of one's hidden potential. This theme aims to explore students' potentials, including their interests, abilities, personality values, and intelligence, from a very basic level up to Grade 13, using various activities and psychometric tests.

- Exploring the world of work, education, planning and decision-making for education and world of work.

It is expected that the process will range from exploring job and career opportunities and roles in the immediate vicinity to broadly exploring local and international opportunities and various ways of working, and from there developing a career plan and an educational plan based on the identified opportunities that align with the student's potential.

Skills required for the world of work:

Thirdly, self-awareness and, after systematically exploring one's place in the world of work, developing the skills and attitudes required in the workplace are necessary.

21st-century skills needed for the world of work, application preparation, interview skills, and development of attitudes needed for the world of work have been developed through various activities.

Maintenance of the career portfolio:

The goal of the Career Portfolio is to ensure that all activities carried out under the career guidance subject from Grade 6 to Grade 13 are maintained as a written or digital career portfolio. This enables students to develop a formal profile of how their abilities, interests, and dreams evolve, supporting them in making self-determined decisions. Furthermore, this information file serves as a vital resource for the Career Guidance Teacher when providing guidance and counselling to students.

All activities from Grade 6 to Grade 13 are organized around four main themes, progressing from simple to more complex levels appropriate for each age group.

9.2 Introduction of Career Guidance as a Subject for Secondary Grades (13-6) Starting in 2027

The new educational reform process proposed for implementation beginning in 2027 recommends introducing the Career Guidance module into the general education system for the first time as a student module under the essential fundamental skills that students must acquire from Grade 6 to Grade 13.

This module, scheduled to be introduced to Grade 6 for the first time in 2027, has been designed so that students can compile a single credit.

The secondary phase of school education is a very distinctive and critical stage academically. During this period, student potential—including abilities, interests, personality values, and intelligence—develops rapidly, along with physical growth. Concurrently, this is also the phase when their future expectations and dreams are gradually cultivated. The main objective of the School Career Guidance subject is to systematically identify these hidden potentials of the students and establish the necessary foundation for them to methodically build their path to enter the future world of work. This involves introducing fundamental concepts about the world of work and creating awareness about it.

Against this background, the Grade 6 Career Guidance activity module is structured to provide students with the opportunity to confirm their identity based on their abilities and interests, gain a basic understanding of various job opportunities and their roles by recognizing fundamental concepts of the world of work, and identify and enhance the life skills that should be developed in ordinary life. All activities included here have been developed very simply, using practical, real-life examples to build student curiosity and focus them toward future goals. The specialty of this module is that it has been enhanced in a simple and friendly manner, allowing students to engage in activities independently.

9.2.1. School Career Guidance Objectives for Grade 6

Based on Sri Lanka's general education objectives and the Career Guidance framework, the activities for Grade 6 students have been planned to create awareness about the world of work and provide fundamental skills, drawing upon the core themes of Self-Awareness, Exploring the World of Work, and Developing Skills Needed for the World of Work.

- Develop self-awareness
  - ◆ To help students identify their interests, strengths, values and personal characteristics.
  - ◆ To guide students in recognizing what they enjoy doing and what they are good at through simple activities and reflection.
- Introduce the concept of jobs/careers

Provide basic knowledge about different types of work, roles within the community, and how people contribute to society.
- Build goal-setting skills

Support students in setting simple academic and personal goals and understanding the steps to achieve them.

- Introduce the importance of decision-making

Help students make basic decisions about school activities, hobbies, and participation, thereby encouraging responsibility.

- Support the development of communication and social skills

Strengthen the interpersonal and social skills essential for future academic and career success.

- Instill positive attitudes towards learning and work

Promote respect for all types of work and the importance of education in achieving professional goals.

Introduce examples of careers relevant to the economy and culture of Sri Lanka (e.g., farming, teaching, tourism, etc.).

9.2.2. General Teacher Instructions for Implementing the Grade 6 Career Guidance Activity Handbook

The Grade 6 School Career Guidance Activity Handbook is unique compared to other subject modules introduced under the educational reform process because it is built upon a self-directed learning approach, where the student engages in self-study.

Therefore, rather than direct teaching, instruction, or intervention regarding the subject content, your role is expected to be that of a Facilitator—encouraging, guiding, and providing the necessary facilities to lead students toward the intended goals of the activity handbook.

The Career Guidance Teacher is expected to carry out the following tasks.

- Identify objectives:

The first step should be to gain a basic understanding of the foundation upon which this handbook is built. For this, primary attention must be given to the syllabus, learning outcomes, included activities, and assessment criteria of this subject.

- Lesson planning and building the relevant environment

While students use the activity handbook in a self-study approach, the teacher must provide the necessary facilities (e.g., collecting required information, videos, leaflets, etc.) and create an environment conducive to performing the classroom activities, encouraging the students throughout.

- Using attractive learning methods

To further reinforce the activities in the student activity handbook, supplementary methods such as group discussions, role-playing, career interest tests, guest lectures, and field trips can be used as necessary.

- Building connections between school career guidance and other school subjects

Guidance should be provided to help students match the relationship between other subjects taught in school and real-life jobs/careers, as well as develop related skills (e.g., group work, problem-solving, effective communication, etc.).

- Maintenance of the career portfolio

Students should be guided to file the activities conducted under the Career Guidance subject from Grade 6 to Grade 13 in digital or hard-copy formats.

- Relationship with parents/guardians

While providing the necessary guidance for students to discuss their career interests with their parents and guardians, teachers should also inform parents about the students' abilities and interests during parent meetings.

- Feedback and assessment

In addition to the formal assessment tools provided for the activities, attention should also be paid to informal assessment (e.g., observation, encouragement, understanding, etc.). It is your responsibility to continuously and positively guide students towards enhancing their potential—such as their abilities, interests, and values—and towards career exploration, while appreciating every effort they make and providing feedback.

- Orientation for long-term exploration

Emphasize to students from the early stages of their education that career exploration is a dynamic and continuous process that changes over time.

Psychometric Tests for Career Guidance

Psychometric Tests for Career Guidance

10.1. Introduction to Psychometric Tests

Psychometric tests, or psychological tests, are standardized scientific tools designed to measure an individual's mental abilities, cognitive capabilities, behavioral styles, and personality traits. Derived from the words “psyche” (mind) and “metrics” (measurement), psychometric tests accordingly assess the functioning of the human brain. Specifically, they provide a systematic method for evaluating characteristics that are difficult to quantify, such as intelligence, aptitude, interests, and emotional functioning.

These tests are widely used in education, psychology, career guidance, and organizational settings. For example, schools use these tests to identify students' learning needs and career preferences, while employers use them in recruitment and selection processes to predict job performance and suitability. Psychologists use psychometric instruments to aid in clinical assessment, diagnosis, and counselling.

Psychometric tests are correlated with career development theories. Psychometric tests have been developed based on the theoretical foundations of career development theories, and it is possible to confirm the practical application of psychometric tests through them.

10.2. Basic Introduction to Career Development Theories

Career Development Theories are frameworks that explain how people choose, prepare for, enter, and progress in their careers over time. These theories help educators, counsellors, and students understand the factors that influence career decisions, such as personality, abilities, interests, values, social background, education, and life experiences.

These theories emphasize that career choice is not a single event, but a lifelong process influenced by individual characteristics and changing opportunities in the world of work. By applying these theories, Career Guidance Teachers can:

- Support students' self-awareness
- Match individual strengths with career opportunities
- Support realistic and flexible career planning, and so on.

Career development is not a one-time decision, but a lifelong, dynamic, and context-dependent process. Over time, several key approaches to career development have been introduced:

- Trait and Factor Approach (Frank Parsons, 1909) – Focuses on matching individual traits with career factors.

Core idea: Career choice depends on aligning a person's abilities and interests with the requirements of an occupation.

Psychometric link: Aptitude tests, interest inventories and skills assessments are used to identify an individual's "traits" and compare them with the "factors" of various professions.

- Life-Span Theory (Donald Super) - Focuses on life stages and roles.

Core idea: Career development is a lifelong process influenced by self-concept, life roles and developmental stages.

Psychometric link: Helps to assess career maturity, vocational identity and the importance of different life roles.

- Personality Theory (John Holland) - Focuses on matching personality types and work environments.

Core idea: Individuals and work environments can be categorized into six types (Realistic, Investigative, Artistic, Social, Enterprising and Conventional - RIASEC). Career satisfaction occurs when an individual's personality matches the work environment.

Psychometric link: Personality tests and interest inventories measure an individual's RIASEC profile.

- Social Learning Theory of Career Decision Making (Krumboltz) - Emphasizes learning experiences, self-efficacy and environmental influences.

Core idea: Career choices are influenced by learning experiences, environmental conditions and genetic factors.

Psychometric link: Interest and values assessments help identify learned preferences; aptitude tests measure abilities that are shaped by the environment and learning.

10.3. Identification and Importance of Standardized Psychometric Tests

10.3.1. Interest Tests

An Interest Test assesses an individual's likes, dislikes, preferences and motivations related to activities, subjects and professions.

It helps identify educational and occupational fields in which an individual is likely to feel most satisfied and successful.

Examples: James Atherton – Career Interest Test; Richard Noddle – Career Test; John Holland – RIASEC model; Kuder – Career Interest Assessment.

Importance of Interest Tests

- In education - Assists students in choosing subject groups and subject streams (e.g., STEMP, Humanities and Sociology, Management and Entrepreneurship, profession).
- In career guidance - Helps match personal interests with suitable occupations.
- In counselling - Emphasizes an individual's self-understanding.
- In employment - Helps individuals position themselves in job roles where they are likely to be motivated and satisfied.

10.3.2. Aptitude Tests

Aptitude Tests are a type of psychometric test designed to measure an individual's potential to perform tasks or solve problems. They assess what a person is capable of doing or their ability to learn, rather than personality traits or interests. These tests are usually time-bound and provide a clear indication of an individual's strengths and limitations across various aptitude domains.

Examples: Raven's Progressive Matrices Test; Binet Test; Jim Barrett - Career Exploration Tests I & II; Richard Noddle - Career Test; John Holland – RIASEC-based assessments.

Importance of Aptitude Tests

- In education: For identifying strengths and weaknesses in students, for subject stream/subject selection, and for identifying learning difficulties.
- In career guidance: For matching individuals' abilities with suitable professional fields and for assisting students in making realistic career choices.
- In counselling and development: For highlighting areas where individuals may need training or skill development, and for encouraging self-awareness of personal strengths.
- In recruitment for employment: Widely used in selection processes for choosing the right candidate for the right role and for minimizing bias.

10.3.3. Personality Tests

A Personality Test is a type of psychometric test designed to measure an individual's character traits, emotional patterns, attitudes and behavioral styles. Unlike aptitude tests (what a person can do) or interest tests (what a person likes to do), personality tests assess how an individual typically thinks, feels, and behaves across various situations. These tests can be used in counselling, education, clinical psychology and employment to gain insight into a person's nature and to predict suitability for specific roles or environments.

Examples: Raymond B. Cattell and others (16PF); Myers-Briggs Type Indicator (MBTI); Rorschach Inkblot Test; Ernst Tupes and Raymond Christal's Big Five Personality Test; Jim Barrett - Personality and Career Satisfaction Test III.

Importance of Personality Tests

- In education and career guidance: Helps students understand their personality strengths and weaknesses and matches personality types with suitable professional environments.
- In counselling and clinical psychology: Helps identify personality disorders, emotional difficulties, or behavioral problems and aids in treatment planning and therapy.
- In employment organizations: Widely used in recruitment and selection to assess teamwork, leadership, adaptability, and stress resilience; useful for career development and training programmes.

In 2023, the Guidance and Counselling Unit of the National Institute of Education (NIE) introduced psychometric tests at the national level for the general education system for the first time. These tests were developed to scientifically identify students' potential—including their abilities, interests, personality values and intelligence—in alignment with the Grade 6-13 Career Guidance Student Activity Handbooks, thereby providing a systematic referral pathway for future education, training, and career opportunities. With an experimental background and the intervention of career guidance subject specialists, the following globally accepted psychometric tests were adapted to suit local, social, economic and cultural contexts and introduced into the school system.

- James Atherton's Career Interest Test
- John Holland-Based Aptitude Test
- John Holland-Based Interest, Aptitude and Personality Test
- Howard Gardner-Based Multiple Intelligences Test
- John Holland's 16 Fields-Based Career Test

It is most suitable to use these tests according to the developmental stages of students. For instance:

Grade 9 - Career Interest Test for exploring student interests

Grade 10 - Aptitude Test for exploring student abilities

Grades 10–11 - Interest, Aptitude and Personality Test for exploring students' interests, abilities and personality traits

Grades 12–13 - Exploring fields of further study, 16 Fields-Based Career Test for exploring job/career fields and training opportunities

In addition, the Multiple Intelligences Test can be used for students aged 16 years and above to identify specific intelligence domains clearly.

10.4. Administering Psychometric Tests, Analyzing Results and Providing Career Counselling

10.4.1. Administering Psychometric Tests

When administering psychometric tests, it is important to focus on the following points:

- Identify the purpose - Clearly determine what you intend to assess using the psychometric tests (e.g., providing career guidance, academic placement, personal development).
- Select appropriate tests - Choose tests suitable for the need and age group:
  - ◆ James: Atherton's Career Interest Test - For Grade 9 students to explore interest fields and to select subject groups
  - ◆ John Holland's Aptitude, Interest and Personality Test - For Grades 10 and 11 students for selecting subject groups, streams and career fields
  - ◆ 16 Fields-Based Career Test – For referring students to further education, career and training opportunities
  - ◆ Howard Gardner's Multiple Intelligences Test - For students aged 16 and above, for studying intelligence domains
- Prepare students - Clearly explain the purpose of conducting the test and provide necessary guidelines.
- Administer the test - Ensure an appropriate testing environment, including a quiet room, clear instructions, time limits and supervised conditions.

10.4.2. Result Analysis

You have the opportunity to take these tests online via the website link: www.nie.ac.lk. After completing the test, students will receive a detailed result analysis, enabling them to study their results independently. If further analysis is required, the downloaded results can easily be referred to the school's Career Guidance Teacher or another relevant authority.

10.4.3. Providing Career Counselling Using Test Results

- Feedback session with students:
  - ◆ Present the results in simple, non-technical language
  - ◆ Highlight strengths and areas for improvement
  - ◆ Encourage self-reflection
- Career matching:
  - ◆ Link test results with suitable academic subjects and career fields
  - ◆ Utilize career information systems or career handbooks. (e.g., Career Information File, Videos including 16 Fields-based Career Fields, etc.).
- Decision-making support:
  - ◆ Guide students in evaluating short-term goals (subject selection, skill development) and long-term goals (career fields, higher education)
- Action plan:
  - ◆ Academic strategies (study methods, teaching, subject focus)
  - ◆ Extracurricular activities (clubs, voluntary service, leadership)
  - ◆ Skill development (language, IT, soft skills)
- Parent and teacher involvement:
  - ◆ Discuss the results with parents in a supportive manner
  - ◆ Collaborate with teachers for follow-up support
- Follow-up:
  - Monitor student progress and re-assess when necessary

Career Counselling Skills and Techniques

11.0. Introduction

Career Counselling is a professional process that helps individuals explore, understand and plan their educational and career choices. In the current global labour market, jobs and professions are undergoing rapid changes. Students and job seekers often face confusion due to multiple career options, social pressures, and a lack of accurate information. In such a context, career counselling guides making informed, realistic and satisfying decisions.

Furthermore, skills (personal and professional capabilities) and techniques (practical tools and strategies) are essential for career counsellors to engage in a more effective counselling process. These enable counsellors to support clients in self-exploration, career planning and overcoming obstacles. Accordingly, career counselling skills (such as empathy, active listening and communication) are the counsellor's personal tools, while techniques (such as psychometric testing, goal setting, motivational interviewing and career mapping) are structured methods used to guide clients. Together, these elements make counselling meaningful and effective.

11.1. Individual Career Counselling

Individual Career Counselling is a professional process in which a counsellor works directly with a client to explore their interests, abilities, values, and goals and to provide guidance for making informed career decisions. Unlike group guidance, individual counselling is conducted one-on-one basis and focuses more intensively on the specific needs of the client.

Objectives of Individual Career Counselling

- Self-Awareness - Helping clients understand their strengths, weaknesses, interests and values.
  - Career Exploration - Providing accurate information about courses, professions and opportunities.
  - Decision-Making - Guiding clients in choosing appropriate educational, career and training pathways.
  - Problem Solving - Addressing challenges such as lack of motivation, learning issues, stress, or family pressure.
  - Goal Setting and Planning - Supporting the development of realistic career plans and action steps.

The advantages of individual career counselling include the ability to provide personalized attention that helps build a strong and trusting relationship, while also enabling a deeper understanding of the client's potential, making it more effective for long-term career planning.

11.2. Classroom/Group Career Counselling

Classroom Career Counselling/Group Career Guidance is a method of providing career-related information, guidance and support to a group of students within a classroom setting. Unlike individual career counselling, this approach is designed to reach many students simultaneously, focusing on general awareness, skill development and decision-making strategies.

Objectives of Classroom Career Counselling

- Creating Awareness - Introducing students to diverse educational and career opportunities.
- Skill Development - Developing life skills such as decision-making, problem-solving, communication and teamwork.
- Equitable Access - Ensuring that all students, regardless of their background, have access to career guidance services.
- Preparation for Transitions - Helping students prepare for transitions such as subject selection, higher education, or entry into the workforce.
- Motivation - Encouraging students to explore their potential and set future goals.

Activities/techniques used in classroom career counselling include career talks or lectures, workshops, career exhibitions, group discussions and multimedia presentations. The advantages of classroom career counselling include the ability to address a large number of students simultaneously, create a collaborative learning environment where students learn from their peers, and efficiently deliver general career information and awareness.

Students Career Portfolio

A Career Portfolio is a collection of a student's work and achievements, showcasing their academic, personal, and professional growth. It goes beyond traditional grades and exam scores, acting as a dynamic record that provides a complete picture of a student's interests, abilities, and aspirations.

Purpose of a Student Career Portfolio

The main purpose of a Career Portfolio is to provide the empowerment necessary for students to take ownership of their learning and career journey. It is useful in the following contexts:

- Reflecting on one's progress: This enables students from Grade 6 to Grade 13 to discover their development and identify areas of strength and areas needing improvement.
- Identifying one's interests and skills: By documenting their achievements and activities, students get the opportunity to identify patterns in their interests and discover hidden talents.
- Setting future goals: The Career Portfolio acts as a planning tool, helping students connect their current activities with their long-term academic and career goals.
- Preparation for future opportunities: The Career Portfolio provides a detailed and credible presentation of a student's skills and experiences for university applications, scholarships, interviews, or job applications.

Structure of a Student Career Portfolio

The Career Portfolio should be a physical or digital folder organized into clearly labeled sections. Here is a recommended structure for a complete portfolio:

1. Personal information:

A cover page with the student's name, grade, school, and a professional-looking photograph.

2. Table of contents:

A list of all sections for easy reference.

3. "About Me" statement:

A personal statement or an essay where the student introduces themselves, their passions, interests, and aspirations. This section should be updated annually.

4. Academic achievements:

- Records: Scanned copies or photographs of term-end or year-end report cards.
- Certificates: Certificates of academic excellence, subject-specific awards, or certificates of participation in academic competitions (e.g., Olympiads).
- Work samples: A collection of the student's best work from various subjects, such as well-written essays, science project reports, or pieces of creative writing.

5. Projects and activities:

- Projects: Records of individual or group projects, including project proposals, research notes, and final presentations.
- Extra-curricular activities: A list of all clubs, societies, or teams the student is a member of, along with details of their role and contribution.

6. Skills and achievements:

- Leadership: Certificates or records of leadership roles, such as being a class monitor, club president, or project leader.
- Sports: Certificates of participation or achievements in sports events, including photographs or newspaper clippings.
- Cultural activities: Records of participation in cultural events such as music, dance, drama, or art. This may include photographs, programs, or certificates.
- Reflections and future goals: A dedicated section where students write a reflective piece on their experiences, what they have learned, and how these activities have shaped their career aspirations. This section should be updated at least once a year.

7. Career guidance section:

This is the most critical part of this initiative. It includes:

- Career exploration: Notes or summaries from career guidance sessions, interviews with professionals, or workplace visits.
- Skills assessment: Results from any skills or career aptitude tests (Psychometric Tests).
- Career plan: A simple plan outlining future career paths, the educational requirements needed for those paths, and the steps the student plans to take to achieve them.
- Letters of recommendation: A collection of any letters of recommendation received from teachers, trainers, or mentors.

How to Maintain and Continuously Update the Career Portfolio

The Career Portfolio is not a one-time project but a living document. Students must be taught how to maintain it continuously.

Quarterly updates: Encourage students to update their portfolio at the end of every school term by adding new achievements, certificates and work samples.

Annual review: At the end of every academic year, students should sit down with a teacher or parent to review their Career Portfolio. This is a critical time for reflection. They should update their 'About Me' statement and the 'Reflections and Future Goals' section.

Digital tools: Introduce students to digital platforms such as Google Drive, Microsoft OneDrive, or specialized portfolio websites. These tools make it easy to organize, share, and update the portfolio from anywhere.

The role of the teacher: Teachers should dedicate specific class time to work on the Portfolio and guide students on what to include and how to reflect on their progress. This makes it a structured activity, not an optional one.

Building the narrative: Teach students to add a short description or note to every item in their Portfolio. This explains its importance and what they learned from the experience. For example, instead of just a certificate, the student can write: "Participated in the Inter-School Science Exhibition. Learned about teamwork and problem-solving while building the volcano model."

|           |                             |                                               |                          |         |                  |                      |
|           |                             |                                               |                          |         |                  |                      |
|           |                             |                                               |                          |         |                  |                      |
|           |                             |                                               |                          |         |                  |                      |
|           |                             |                                               |                          |         |                  |                      |
